THE ARROWOOD CASE TALKED OF HIS RACE

Statement by the Midship- Dr. W. D. Crum at Metroman's Father.

DENOUNCES THE PERSONNEL OF THE NAVY.

Claims That the Young Man's Violation of His Oath Was in Accordance With His Rights.

Midshipman Milton W. Arrowood, whose case has recently attracted so much attention because of its novelty, is a passenger on the battle ship Maine, now on its way from New York to Guantanamo. This young man was recently arrested in New York on the charge of desertion. Previously he had tendered his resignation, but the Secretary of the Navy refused to accept it on the ground that the young man under his entrance oath was obliged to serve in the navy at least eight years, including his four years' course at the acad-

When young Arrowood received the department's letter he was on the battle ship him out of curiosity, and he also knew Kearsarge at Hampton Roads. He obtained shore leave, and did not return to important factor in the questions of curhis ship, which subsequently sailed to the West Indies without him. When arrested at New York several weeks later he was working in a real estate office. As he was attached to the North Atlantic station, his case was referred by the department to Rear Admiral Barker, com-manding that station, for such action as he deemed proper. Pending the departure of the Maine for the headquarters of the fleet at Guantanamo, the young officer was held in confinement on the receiving ship Hancock at the New York navy yard. On arriving at Guantanamo he will be transferred to the Kearsarge, Admiral Barker's flagship, and be tried on the charge of de-The case is specially remarkable in that the reason given for Midshipman Arro-wood's desire to quit the naval service was that he could not remain in it and be a that he could not remain in it and be a Christian at the same time. It is said he was inspired with that idea by his father, Rev. M. C. Arrowood, a clergyman in North Carolina, who has written several letters to the Navy Department criticising the administration of naval affairs from a religious standarding. a religious standpoint.

Mr. Arrowood's Statement.

Mr. Arrowood has recently published a long statement of his position in the matter, from which it appears that it was the father and not the son who attacked the morality of the naval service. In the course of his published statement the elder Arrowood says, referring to his letter of complaint to the Navy Department:

"I said that the 'bickering, injustice and jealousies of the service were such that my son could not be true to the demands of the head and integrity his conscience demand-ed.' What I said in my letter to the department was said on my own initiative and information, my son knowing nothing about it, and not directly or indirectly re

The Navy Personnel.

"Is the personnel of the navy immoral? No, when judged by the world's standard of morals. Is it Christian? Again no, when judged by the standard of morals recognized by and advocated by Protestant Christianity. I do not suppose any one would characterize the doing of the four hundred as immoral, for the world has set its seal of approval; in fact, it is the world, and the world is it; neither could any one be found so bold as to characterize the social four hundred as a bright and shining example of Christian morals, with its winings and dinings, its balls and ards, its bettings and racings and fast life generally. Look well to the social life of the four hundred, and you have a replica of the social life of the navy. Is this morality? Yes, the world and Admiral Coghian, 'Young Men's Christian Association and the social life of the social life. The social life of the social life. tion preacher in his old age, etc., says it is. Is it Christian? No, by all the shades of our Scotch forefathers, from whom we have inherited our love of freedom and right, and from whom we have learned how to love and defend the truth, we declare it to be absolutely un-Christian.

Right to Rescind Oatht.

"My son had an inalienable right to reseind his oath of service. He told the department in his resignation application that he found he could not meet the requirements of the service, therefore he wished his resignation accepted, or words to that effect. The department very per-emptorily refused. The department knew my son better than he knew himself, I sup-pose. I do not wonder that Arrowood's 'case is in many ways the most remark-able the Navy Department ever had to deal with. Arrowood and his father have been fighting a battle for righteousness from the first day of his entrance until the present, and the end is not yet. This is something the department seldom meets with, consciousness, righteousness, as distinguished from worldly morality. Of course we are not expecting the approval of the world or the navy in this matter. Another thing I want the public to know, and I am done. Midshipman Arrowood com-municated with the department that he was I am done. ready to appear at any time at the Navy Department in New York for trial. Notwithstanding this the department had him arrested, I suppose to humiliate him and his friends as much as possible.

Noted State Guardsman Dead.

General Richard A. Donnelly, quartermaser of the National Guard of New Jersey, died Monday at Trenton, N. J., of Bright's disease aggravated by heart trouble. General Donnelly had been ill for some weeks. His funeral will take place on Thursday with military honors.

General Donnelly was born at Richmond Staten Island, in the year 1841. He began his military career in February, 1860, as a private in Company B, 1st Regiment, Hudson Brigade. At the breaking out of the civil war he enlisted in Company L, 1st New Jersey Volunteers. He was advanced to the grades of corporal and sergeant re-spectively. He was discharged from the United States service by reason of disability caused by gunshot wounds received in battle. In 1867 he came to Trenton and embarked in business.

In 1892 he was chosen commander of the G. A. R. department of New Jersey. He was twice elected to the assembly, and served two terms as mayor of the city of Trenton. He served as treasurer of the democratic state committee from September, 1895, until October, 1901. In 1899 he was nominated by Governor Voorhees for appointment as major general by brevet for his long and meritorious services as quar-termaster general, and the nomination was unanimously confirmed by the state senate.

This Government's Disclaimer.

To further set at rest rumors which have been printed recently respecting alleged negotiations for peace, it was authoritatively announced at the State Department that:

"The government of the United States has never received from the Japanese government any request to lay propositions of peace before the Russian government, and of course has never, in any manner, direct-ly or indirectly, approached the Russian government on the subject."

This statement was made directly after Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister, had conferred with Secretary Hay.

JUSTIFIES HIS SON NEGRO HIS THEME

LARGE AND ATTENTIVE AUDI-ENCE FILLS THE EDIFICE.

Tells Story of Slavery and Benefits Accruing to Colored Man Since

A large and appreciative audience greeted Dr. William D. Crum, collector of the port of Charleston, S. C., at the Metropolitan A. M. E. Church, M street near 15th street northwest, last night, when he delivered his lecture, entitled "Is the Negro a Hindrance to the Progress of the Nation?"

The fame of the speaker had gone abroad, his selection to the office which he holds by President Roosevelt and his eventual confirmation by the Senate having been one of the most talked of appointments of the present administration. Dr. Crum said, in opening his remarks, he knew that many of his audience had come to hear that at one time a "crumb" was a most rent politics. The lecture was given for the benefit of a charity of the church, and following the charity of the church, and following the speakers Dr. Crum received those who passed to the platform. Refreshments were later served. Bishop Wesley J. Gaines presided, and the choir of the church sang, opening with "America." Rev. O. J. W. Scott, pastor of the church, opened with prever. The church was decorated with prayer. The church was decorated with the national flag, while potted plants and cut flowers adorned the rostrum and pulpit. The Blaine Invincibles, led by Perry Carson, all in their uniforms, marched into the church to music by the organ, presided over by John T. Layton. It had been expected that Representative

Edward de V. Morrell of Pennsylvania would introduce the speaker, but a night session of the House prevented, and in his place Bishop Gaines requested John C. Dancy, recorder of deeds, to make the introductory address. Mr. Dancy said that at one time no more prominent man lived in this country, with the exception of the President, than Dr Crum, of whom he said he was a sterling patriot and a noble leader devoted to his duties as a citizen and an an official of the government. He said that he began with no opportunities, but advanced to success, outgeneraling all obstacles until he now came before the audience as a representative of the people whose government he upheld and whose

Dr. Crum's Address.

Dr. Crum said he thanked the distinguished gentleman for the compliment he had bestowed upon him, and that whether or not he deserved it time alone would tell. He then said that the American people were a generous people, but sometimes they lacked the courage to do justice to a man because he was not colored white.

"The negro," he said, "in his enslaved condition, which had existed for two and about it, and not directly or indirectly responsible for a single sentence in it. Now, one-half centuries on this continent, took up the religion of the white man and he tried his best to serve him with all-his might. The American Idian, on the congation doubts it for a moment. The whole service from top to bottom in this respect is honeycombed with rottenness. scheme of American civilization "The negro was made to do all that is expected of a slave, but in spite of his sorrows, in spite of his lack of opportuni-ties, he is the most forgiving of people, the most loving character in history under oppression, and when I am asked if he is a menace to the progress of this nation I wish to enter a solemn denial right here that he is a menace to the peace of the nation or a hindrance to its progress. Slavery was a canker to the American nation. gnawing out the vitals of the country, but abolition came, and a new era sprang up. This strenuous move was made on the part of a God-fearing people who had religion in their souls and believed that all human beings should be free. It was this move-ment that caused the birth of the republican party with Abraham Lincoln as its intrepid leader, and we have reason to be lieve that his natural successor will carry out that leader's great purpose. As Lin-coln said, in that slogan that marked the beginning of the great strife that was to come: 'This country cannot exist half slave and half free.' That phrase was the death-knell of slavery."

He then reviewed the convention of the southern states and the secession of each, the firing on Fort Sumter, April 12, 1861, and the great war which followed. "Lincoin, in the kindness of his great heart,' he said, "called for 75,000 troops to put "called for 75,000 troops to put down the rebellion. They were asked to serve for three months. He little knew then what a gigantic struggle was to take place before the arms of the north had conquered their brothers of the southland. The southern soldiers were trained as well as their brothers of the north. They had been educated for war at that great school at West Point, and when the flower of the youth of the north responded to Lincoln's call so did the flower of the south flock to their standard. But the sutherner left be hind him his faithful slave to protect his women and children and never yet had that trust been found faithless. Then it was found that the negro must play a part in that war. He was not a free man; he had no country which he could call his country, no flag which he could call the flag of his country. These stars and these stripes meant for him only misery, yet he sprang to the front to show that by courage and endurance he was willing to do his part to save that country which had been the author of his misery. And I maintain the author of his misery. And I maintain that the man who is willing to stand up and be shot down for a country deserves every consideration of manhood, and we stand ready today to prove that the same feelings exist that existed then. That being so, the American negro cannot be a menace to the progress of this nation. And I wish to say to you that there is no man within the hearing of my voice tonight who would not rise up in his righteous wrath to punish an outrage on American womanhood.

Beginning of Peace. "At the close of the great struggle be tween the north and the south the terms were magnanimous from the great General Grant to the great General Lee. There was then peace, and there is peace now, but for us there is no peace yet. We want to live in harmony with the white people of this great country, and I ask of them that they do not judge us by our loafers, but to take the best of us and judge us on our merits. It took the white man a thousand years to reach civilization; it took hundreds before they dared to demand the Magna Charta. The faithful people of my race gave two hundred and fifty years of their strength to the south, and it seems to me that our southern brothers ought to be grateful for what our ancestors gave them. The thirteenth amendment gave us citizenship, but that citizenship is largely on paper. All we ask of Congress is that it give to us what that amendment intended and carry out its provisions. Cutting down southern representation will not cure the evil of repression of the rights of the negro under that amendment. merely palliative, it is not curative.

"After the civil war came the war with Spain, which was like sending a big boy to whip a small boy. But it looked for a time as if Spain would not let our troops get up that bloody hill of San Juan. Then there were seen the brawny shoulders and the black faces of the troopers of the 9th and 10th Cavalry, and they swarmed up that hill and planted the flag of our country on that Spanish block house. They saved the day there, and let the foe come again and you will find us as ready as then to show that the negro is not only willing to battle for his rights but for his country.

What Race is Doing.

"We have 87 per cent of our race in agriculture and 13 per cent in the professions. George A. Allen, United States district attorney for western Pennsylvania under President Cleveland, died at Erie, Pa., Sunday, aged sixty-six.

Schooner Floated. The two-masted schooner Cherubim, Captain Mumford, a well-known visitor to this ort, which went ashore on a shoal in Pimlico sound, North Carolina, in a gale over a month ago, has been floated by the United States revenue cutter Boutwell, and was taken into port at Newbern, N. C., for necessary repairs. The crew at the Portsmouth life saving station had made several efforts to float the vessel, but without success, and the Boutwell was finally summoned. Aided by an unusually high tide the cutter succeeded in pulling the schooner into deep water after working three hours over her. The Cherubim is reported to be but little damaged by her long stay on the sand bar.

a field. It is the false cry of social equality that we hear. It is a scarecrow, a humbug. We do not ask social equality, but we ask and demand civil rights. All we ask of the and demand civil rights. All we ask of the nation is to give us a fair chance, and if we do not measure up to the standard of citizenship I will admit our unworthiness. But I declare that the negro has all the elements of true manhood. They are dor-mant, but give him the opportunity and they will spring forth into life and activity and the negro will prove to be a high ideal of American citizenship. We have 300,000 members of the church and property valued at $40,000,000. We have 300,000 children in charge of 2,700 negro teachers; 900 negro doctors who never make mistakes, or if they do they bury them, like their white brothers, and 1,000 negro lawyers who handle our cases, be they anything from the transfer of a chicken to a suit at law. Our record is good and we ask but our rights under the revised Constitution of our

COURTESIES TO CHINA. Rules Suspended to Allow Admission to West Point. The controversy over the admission to the West Point Military Academy of two Chinese subjects-Ying Hsing Wen and Ting Chia Chen-was renewed in the House yesterday, when Mr. Hull (Iowa) again offered the resolution having that object in view. Its consideration by unanimous consent was objected to by Mr. Butler (Pa.), whereupon Mr. Hull moved a suspension of the rules. To refuse the permission now, he said, was a certification to the world that the United States would extend such courtesies to Japan and other nations, and tefuse it to China; in the face of the desire of this country to extend its trade rela-tions with the latter pation.

Declaring the practice to be bad, Mr.
Maddox (Ga.) said he did not believe the United States ought to teach foreigners its methods of war, Without further discussion the rules were suspended and the resolution passed. Two Killed in a Quarrel.

quarrel between Edward Stevens, a prominent planter, and four negroes has led to the killing of Stevens and his brother, W. H. Stevens, and the wounding of a negro named Wilder, one of the slayers of the Stevens brothers. The negroes escaped. A sheriff and posse are searching for the Edward Stevens, it is said, had gone to the cabin of Wilder, near the former's home and had become engaged in a quarrel with him, Wilder's wife and two other negroes. W. H. Stevens, running up to the cabin, tried to quiet the disturbance. Later the quarrel was renewed, and he hastened back to the scene, when he says Wilder's wife rushed upon his brother. W. H. Stevens raised a shotgun and fired at the woman. Wilder and his companion promptly drew pistols and fired on the Stevens brothers killing both.
